

The Pan-American Exposition
Will be the greatest this country has ever seen. The entire machinery will be run by power furnished from Niagara Falls. Although the power required is enormous we believe this cataraet is equal to the task, the same as Hosieter's Stomach Bitters is equal to the task of supplying the body with motive power when it is run down. There is no medicine in the world so good for dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, flatulency and nervousness. Try it.

A Medical Testimonial.
Sirs: We fed our baby on modified cow's milk the first six months, but the milkman did not understand how to modify his cows properly, and in consequence the child lost flesh till he weighed but one pound.
I now procure some of your celebrated Infant's Food. This the baby managed to trade off to the dog for some dog biscuit, which he ate, and is now well and hearty. The dog died, but dogs are cheap.
We are grateful to you, indeed. You may use my name if you like, John Jones.—Detroit Journal.

PAN-AMERICAN BANNERS.
In the Plaza is a green banner with the words "Welcome."
On either side of the Electric tower is a large light green banner with golden design.
On the different buildings are placed South American flags; between each of the South American flags are Pan-American flags.
On each side of the Triumphal Causeway float golden banners, with the coat-of-arms of the United States. The banners are gold to repeat the color used on the pylons.
In the Acetylene building are air-gonol signs showing the history of light in 16 different stages of invention—the first panel being a wafer, the last an acetylene gas light.
From the two large flag poles in the Esplanade float large flags. The poles are 99 feet high. On them the flags of different countries, cities, states or societies will be raised on their respective days.
In the Agriculture building a feature of the decorations is the Pan-American and state flags and coats-of-arms of different states and countries exhibiting. They are placed between the garlands, holding them up.
On the poles of the Lilly and Cypress courts float large red flags with floral designs float with 64 small streamers, carrying the colors (not flags) of the South American republics—red, white, blue, green and yellow.
On the corners of the Electricity building are placed the flags of the four European powers having colonies in this hemisphere. On the northwest corner, France; southwest, Holland; northeast, Denmark; southeast, England.

THE DAIRY
SILO CONSTRUCTION.
Observations and Experience of an Ohio Farmer Who Says He Has No Ax to Grind.
Before building my silo I examined silos of different construction, some of stone, some of cement and others of wood; some round and some square. Then I built my silo of wood, square, with corners well rounded. I aimed to make my silo strong and cheap. There are many methods of construction, some complicated and costly. But I still think that the simplest, strongest, cheapest airtight pit that will preserve the silage is the best.
I believe that for the best practical results the diameters should range from 12 to 16 feet, according to the amount of stock fed from the silo. I do not think it advisable or practical to build a silo smaller than 12 feet square or 12 feet in diameter. And rather than go above 16 or 18 feet in diameter I advise increasing the capacity by building more silos. The craze just now is for the round stave silos, but I think the average farmer who expects to build a silo would better build a square frame with rounded corners, for the following reasons:
A square wood silo with ribs or girts around it horizontally, lined up and down inside and weatherboarded outside, whether built in a barn or outside, whether tied to another building or standing alone, will always be firm and rigid, and will not suffer from the drying-out process that occurs during the hot weather, when the silo is empty. And this, I think, is a strong point in favor of the frame silo. I have learned of round silos that went to wreck, like an old barrel, in the dry weather. In the Wisconsin bulletin No. 83 the writer says he visited a number of stave silos that were badly damaged and wrecked in this drying-out process and by the wind. In my judgment this wrecking process would be worse in a silo where the staves had been spliced, for they must be made weaker in splicing the staves.

FRAME FOR SILO.
The diagram shows a square frame with rounded corners, with a cross-section view labeled 'CORNER OF THE SILO.' The text describes the construction details, including the use of staves and the importance of airtightness.

GLASS BRIC-A-BRAC.
Glass, though proverbially brittle, will stand any amount of hard usage; but once it is broken the only thing that remains to be done is to throw it away. Cementing will not do much good.
Glass that has been properly annealed will stand variations of temperature perfectly well, but if this hasn't been done it is likely to break instantly and without apparent reason.
Frequently globes and chimneys fly to pieces when not properly heated. This is due to draught or moisture upon the chimney, especially lamp chimneys, which will crack from top to bottom even after the lamp has been extinguished.
Glass vases used for flowers frequently become coated with an unpleasant deposit in the inaccessible parts of the inside. This is due to decayed stems of flowers that are left too long in the water. This deposit may be removed by cleaning with a cloth that has been dipped in pumice-stone powder.

Didn't Want Knowledge.—A gentleman one day saw a boy peeling the bark from one of his choice trees with a hatchet. CORNER OF THE SILO.
As I am not a draughtsman, I inclose an illustration from the Wisconsin bulletin that exactly indicates the framework of my silo, except that my silo is 30 feet high and that the girts are closer than here indicated. The corner pieces or segments are not properly indicated in the cut, so I have drawn another sketch that more clearly indicates them. In Fig. 2 you will see that I have the corner well rounded. From the inside of the corner (A) to the face of the segment (B) is 12 inches, and we have no trouble in going around this corner with ordinary tongued and grooved flooring. We lined this framework with yellow pine flooring and gave it a coat of hot coal tar every year; one dollar's worth of tar and one dollar's worth of labor are ample for this work. It is airtight and preserves the silage perfectly, and I believe if the tarring is not neglected the lining will last indefinitely. Some advocate a brick lining, but I do not think this practical, for the crevices would let in the air and the outside woodwork could not well be made airtight. While in wood-lined silo, tongued and grooved, the moisture of the silage will at once swell it into an airtight condition, and when the tarring is well done the drying out is reduced to the minimum and the wood protected against decay.
The next pit I will build will be of the same construction, but larger. I believe it is practical to build them firm enough and strong enough against any bulging, up to 16 feet square. I do not think cement at all practical in silo construction (except as a foundation), for the least swelling or contraction would crack and break the coating and let the air in.—M. C. Morris, in Ohio Farmer.
